A message from our convenor, Carol Coldwell

I hope everyone is keeping safe! This awful virus is spreading rapidly and none of us should feel complacent and take any risks! Sadly, our normal HNW activities are still curtailed, and our November and December Christmas activities will be on Zoom, as will be the committee meeting on November 8th. When lockdown is fully lifted, we will have a belated Christmas lunch and get together, probably in the New Year. We have an extensive list of workshops and activities planned for 2021, details of which you'll find below, but some with dates to be confirmed because of the uncertainty. Higham Hall is now cancelled due to Covid-19, although Shelley Fairplay had pulled out due to having Long Covid. We've had several hire harps returned recently, and my spare room looks like a harp store, but the good news is that several members have taken the plunge and bought their own harp! Keep harping and we look forward to seeing you all again in the New Year. Carol x

SATURDAY 3rd OCTOBER - 10:00 until 12:30
MACMILLAN COFFEE MORNING on ZOOM

A huge thank you to the 23 harpists who joined the session and donated. We welcomed harpists from across the nation, including friends from other harp groups. A relaxed fun morning was enjoyed and a terrific variety of tunes was shared. Thanks to those harpists who led their favourite tunes. Many, many thanks to the arrangers and composers, Wendy Stewart, Isobel Mieras, Ruth Flavin, Rachel Hair, Charlotte Petersen and Anna Crosby-Gaudet, who willingly allowed their music to be shared. Why not think about purchasing some of their music? (see below) We raised over £300 for Macmillan Cancer Support. The donations page remains open until January 2021. I like the suggestion from one member that this becomes an annual event! Gill <https://thyg.uk/BUU004397660>

Members' comments.

In this time of lockdown, I feel blessed to have been invited to connect with fellow harpists and, through joining in with HNW Zoom sessions, have been able to maintain interest in playing and feel I have been lucky, from the Isle of Arran, to have access to such a lovely, friendly group of people. It's been a real joy hearing other harps play and often, hearing how I should be playing!! I learn something valuable at each session. Today, we heard music from everywhere including France and Canada. I enjoyed it all and especially like that we have options to accommodate all skill levels. There was a terrific variety, so thanks to whoever arranged the set list. It was a most enjoyable coffee morning and for such a worthy cause. Many thanks to all involved in the arrangements. Already, I'm looking forward to the next time. Elizabeth x

Thank you for the music and, yes, the playing session was great fun, all for such a good cause too! Kath W xx

Thanks for this Gill - a great morning! Lyn x

A BIG THANK YOU to you for organising this morning! It was so MUCH better than an ordinary MacMillan coffee morning! Judy T.

PLAYING IN A SESSION WITH SUSAN LAMBERT - a Workshop on Zoom
Sunday 18th October 10:00 until 12:00

Members' comments.

A wonderful Sunday morning! Judy T.

Susan did a grand job there and it was lovely to see everyone. Alice P.

I absolutely loved Susan's inspiring Zoom session with folk music this morning! I felt myself constantly grinning! Relearning theory of chord progressions to use in music which is absent of accompaniment, was presented in a fun way! Thank you, Susan. You have worked so hard, I'm sure, to compile your booklet! It is much appreciated! Kath W.

It was a really good tutorial, packed with useful fun information. Looking forward to receiving Susan's notes.

Elizabeth.

Thanks for a great workshop. Susan is a first class tutor. Best wishes. Eil Bentley

I really enjoyed Susan's session and found it very useful, particularly as I belong to a little community folk group, playing with another instrument – good to know how to make the most of my harp in these sessions! I'll be looking out for more of Susan's sessions in the future. Best wishes. Chris S.

Have just finished the most stimulating Sunday Morning for a long time! Such fun and SO professionally presented! Thank you so much Susan. Anon was delighted to be able to be part of the 18th October's workshop with Susan Lambert this morning. Her introduction about rhythms and chords on C, F, & G were sympathetically explained. Little did I realize at the time that it was the basis for the whole workshop. I loved the pieces which she chose for us to play from the Sessions selection & her whistle videos were brilliant. I was rather amazed at the speed of some of the pieces but know that session players can get carried away. I don't think I can manage to play all of the pieces at the fast tempo, but I'll try!! Remember that Harp players shouldn't really play a guitar, a ukulele (I know Mary does), or the other string instruments of the orchestra! One gets tracking lines on ones fingers!! Thank you Susan for a most enlightening workshop. With best wishes Marie Carson.

Wow, what a wonderful Sunday morning with Susan learning about many possibilities of playing in a session. I loved the ideas about looking for patterns in the music and tunes, thinking in numbers and the importance of counting! I wasn't very good at not panicking when I heard the speed of some of the tunes but loved Susan's encouraging messages and tips and I did manage to play a few bars /notes here and there.... but best of all it was great fun & hopefully we can do more. A big thank you to Susan. Best wishes Annie Allison

Members' comments cont. On Sunday 18th October we had a lovely workshop with Susan Lambert, teaching us her hints and wrinkles for us to join in and become seasoned session players. Accomplished sight readers are prone to panic attacks without the dots, forgetting that the nursery rhymes they know were all learnt by ear. Susan reminded us how to listen to find the key note and the tune, to number and play chords one to seven in the scale, how to find essential chord patterns and keep to simple or compound time. This was all clearly and simply explained. We had great fun playing along to her teaching tapes starting with Marie's Wedding, ending with Spootiskerry, by way of John Ryan's and Egan's Polka set, and the gentle South Wind. Zooming workshops are a new learning and teaching opportunity for all of us, but nothing beats playing together. It would be really good for us all to get these tunes under our fingers, with our own chord accompaniments so we can do just that when we can meet in the same room again. Thank you Susan for a great morning. Jane Freshwater

A bit more about Spootiskerry This is a modern Shetland Reel composed by Samuel Ian Rothmar Burns, Ian Burns circa 1980, fiddler, piper, accordionist. From The Session website, paraphrasing Nigel Gatherer, 'I have a copy of Ian Burns's tunebook, which is called "Spootiskerry". There's also a photo of the composer at Spootiskerry looking across to the town of Brae. In his introduction Burns says, "Spootiskerry - was the croft belonging to my late grand aunts, Bella and Joan Nicolson, situated between the village of Sullom, and the new town of Brae. Originally spelt Spootskerry, but as the years have passed, and "i" or an "a", and sometimes an "o" have been added... I have named my book Spootiskerry as that was the name I gave my first composition.' A skerry is a group of offshore rocks submerged at high tide. Spoots are razor clams, they spout, spoot, when you walk above them, if you walk backwards on the shore you can quickly dig down with a long knife and harvest them or pour salt into the hole and they surface. Don't overcook, they go rubbery. In the Western Isles I bought some from the fish van in Castlebay, Barra, then scalded them for a minute. I then went upmarket and ate them with melted garlic butter. Lots of fancy recipes on the internet. Jane Freshwater

NEWS of OTHER RECENT EVENTS

Furness Tradition Zoom Concert with Rachel Hair and Ron Jappy

Friday 16th October was a first in many ways. It was the first in a series of online concerts put on by local folk organisation Furness Tradition. Their usual summer festival had successfully moved online for a series of short live concerts via Zoom, which had proved successful, and so it was only natural that their autumn series of concerts would do the same. In a bid to bring LIVE music to people these concerts are interactive as they take place via Zoom it means the artist has a real sense of the audience, even if it's in little boxes on a computer screen and actual applause can be seen and heard. The wonders of technology mean the sound can be monitored and, in some cases, mixed by a professional sound engineer not even at the same location as the artist! This also becomes an income stream for self-employed musicians and sound engineers whose income can be almost non-existent in these present times.

It was a first for Rachel and Ron as they hadn't done a live online gig before. They were a little apprehensive at first but having talked it through with FT's sound engineer, Pete Ord, with whom they had worked before, they felt reassured and raring to go.

A first for many of the audience, as they didn't really know what to expect when they logged on with their concert link. You sit in a virtual waiting room until you are 'let in' by the host and when everyone is in the 'rules' of the game are made clear, all audience members are muted during performance, unmuted for applause and questions for Rachel and Ron can be sent via the chat box to the Host as there is to be a question and answer session after the interval. All these new terms to come to grips with!

What a treat was in store! Rachel and Ron settled down and looked as if they were having great fun and this was reflected in the music. They played us pieces from their new album 'Sparks' which covers traditional, self-penned and contemporary tunes. The sound was great, the audience were loving it and the time just flew. The 'Question and Answer' session brought a mixture of serious and amusing questions which were all answered in good spirit, a nice addition to the proceedings. On with the music and the second half was a continuation of the wonderful talent of Rachel and Ron. I for one then went on and bought their new CD, brilliant.

Thank you Rachel Hair and Ron Jappy for such a wonderful evening of harp and guitar music and thank you Furness Tradition for such a musical treat. Furness Tradition will be putting on more concerts via Zoom over the coming months details can be found at:

Rachel's CD can be purchased direct from her website at: rachelhair.com. Hazel Ord
